

G.E.N Education has designed a 9-class reading and writing camp for students from Grade 1 to Grade 6 (rising). This camp prepares children for the cognitive skills needed through reading to understand American history (fiction or non-fiction). These necessary skills include vocabulary, decoding, analytical skills, communication skills, and writing skills. Classroom teaching methods follow the American private school round table discussion method. The purpose is to encourage children to actively participate in the class discussion. The interaction with teachers and other children will help establish critical thinking and the ability to analyze problems, which is suitable for the American education system.

Mr. James: 7 years of teaching experience. After graduating from Phillips Academy, Andover , he entered the prestigious George Washington University to study Chinese and East Asian history.

Ms. Nancy: 20+ years of teaching experience. She taught at the famous Rise Tide Charter School in Massachusetts as an English teacher for grades 4-6. She graduated from the Governor's Academy, a prestigious boarding high school in New England, and received a bachelor's degree from the University of New Hampshire.
